1st House: This is the house of the self. This includes all facets of the self, addressing, but not limited to, self-esteem, self-value, self-worth, self-confidence, self-love, self-respect, self-indulgence, self-reflection, establishing an identity, and developing an identity.

2nd House: This is the house of using what you've got, so to speak. Thus, this is the house of personal resources, and personal resource management. In a lot of astrological texts, this is the house of money, and this is due to the fact that money is a physical representation of an exchange of energy.

3rd House: This is a varied house, but it continues the theme from the other two houses. This is the house of personal communications, siblings, and short distance travels and trips.

4th House: This is the house of the home, and of domesticity. This house can also address the roots one comes from. This is also the house of religion, which is different from spirituality.

5th House: The 5th house is the house of creative self-expression. In many astrological books, this is also the house of children and artistic expression, but that is because both of those categories can be seen as self-expression made more physical. However, this is also the house of hobbies and of gambling.

6th House: In the 6th house we find the day to day work routine. Notice that this is different than the 10th house. This house also corresponds to being of service to others, and it corresponds to health as well.

7th House: The first house above the horizon, the 7th house is the house of personal, one on one relationships. Part of the 7th house also addresses the roles that we play in such environments, such as mediator, diplomat, etc. This is the opposite house of the 1st house.

8th House: Being the opposite house of the 2nd house, the 8th house is the house of shared resources, and shared resource management. However, there are extensions of this house to consider as well. This house also corresponds to business, sex, death, inheritances, and legacies.

9th House: This is the house of the higher mind, and is the opposite of the 3rd house. This house corresponds to philosophy, spirituality, publishing, psychology, and finance.

10th House: Unlike the 6th house, this is the house of the occupation and profession. This house is the opposite house of the 4th, and because of that, we can gain some insight into its nature. This is the house of maturity and the house of the career.

11th House: This is the house of groups, no matter the context. Thus, this house can cover everything from groups of friends to professional development groups. This is opposite of the 5th house.

12th House: Being the opposite of the 6th house, this is the house of sacrifice, endings, and the subconscious. This is also the last house in the zodiac, and thus it can represent things coming to a conclusion as well.
